1967 AT A GLANCE ...

Though the United States was proud and student revolt was building up in Berkeley, the nation, from Columbia to Berkeley, reflected in the best sellers of the year. The Chosen by Chaim Potok, which harkened back to the death of John the Baptist, advanced publicity and controversy. Do Manchester exceeded all other new books, by more than 500,000. It sold 179,000. Another "Tonight's Diller, tied for 9-9-10 on the list with a Manual. Popular poetry made the list for Mokuam's books were to appear frequently. Stanyan Street & Other Sorrows, described as "for music," marked his first appearance in 1967, 137,572.

Nonfiction was notable for the one, tied for 9-9-10th place. The Modern Priest Looks at His Out. Our Crowd by Stephen Birmingham, set in Brooklyn's Williamsburg against the Orthodox ways of life of Chosen, in second place, was the first in Virginia in 1831. The Confessions of Nat Turner, in third place, had additional sales through Book-of-the-Month Club. The best sellers were by well-known authors. The best seller of the early years of this century, was Thomas Mann's Buddenbrooks, almost 20 years. There was an unusual
